Submission Number Two

This submission seeks

[redacted]

2) to present additional ideas as possible solutions to tackle the issue of 'intimidation' of candidates and Party workers.

1. Submission Process

2a. Advertising Material Used by Candidates / Partys
... That a requirement exist for the biodegradability or recycling of electoral advertising materials (ie coreflute, paper, cardboard, fabric) within a set period, prior to the next

Federal election (eg. 4yrs). Although 'biodegradability' and 'reuse' is currently NOT legislated (ie law) in government trading entities or departments, I believe the 'practice' is encouraged to minimise pollution (land, water, air), and should be reflected in requirements for electoral advertising practice.

'Reuse' of advertising material such as coreflute, merely delays landfill input, and when not physically removed from the site of attachment (ie trees) interferes with flora and fauna.

2b .. That the "Control period" for political advertising be extended to commence 7 days after the prime ministers official announcement of the election date.

2c ... That a model "Code of Conduct" guidelines be drawn and published (by the Electoral Commission) for candidates and their workers, and volunteers.

This 'code of conduct' is to outline behaviour regarded as 'intimidation' within the current 6 m ruling.

The 'Officer in Charge' (or other designated polling official) is to have authority to report offences noted, (or offences reported to them by affected individuals) in accord with the guidelines. As verbal abuse from individuals standing outside the 6m limit is audible to members of the public within the 6m perimeter, it is suggested that the Electoral Commission powers be extended to act accordingly.

Yours Sincerely
